✓ What is an EPR License?

EPR License stands for Extended Producer Responsibility License — it is an official registration/authorization issued by the Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB) in India. It ensures that producers, importers, or brand owners are legally responsible for the collection, recycling, and disposal of the plastic waste generated from their products or packaging.

Who Needs an EPR License?

Any company involved in producing, importing, or selling products with plastic packaging must obtain an EPR license under the Plastic Waste Management Rules, 2016 (amended in 2022).

You need EPR registration if you are a:

- ✓ Importer (e.g. importing goods in plastic packaging)
- ✓ Manufacturer (of plastic packaging)
- ✓ Brand Owner (even if you don't manufacture directly)
- ✓ Producer of products sold in plastic containers or wrappers

Why Is It Required?

Because plastic waste must be tracked and managed responsibly. The government wants to ensure that companies:

- Don't leave plastic waste in the environment
- Take accountability for the waste created
- Recycle or dispose it through authorized recyclers or PROs (Producer Responsibility Organizations)

Who Issues the License?

- CPCB (Central Pollution Control Board) – for PAN-India operations
- SPCB (State Pollution Control Board) – for operations in a single state (for certain categories)

Who can apply for the

Documents Required for EPR Registration:

- Company PAN & GST
- IEC Certificate (for importers)
- Company Registration (Udyam/MSME/CIN)
- Details of plastic packaging (type & quantity)
- Waste Management Plan
- Authorized Person's Aadhaar and Photo
- Digital Signature Certificate (DSC)

How Long Does It Take?

Usually 15–30 working days if all documents are complete and correct.
